

THE CHOICE OF MANAGEMENT MODEL AS DETERMINANT OF EFFICIENCY THE ENTERPRISE ACTIVITY

Summary

Centralization and decentralization represent extremes. Centralization allows top managers to exercise control over the organization. They can stay attuned to everything the organization is doing and make sure that decisions are being made according to their preferences. Decentralization distributes control more evenly throughout the organization by giving more managers the authority to make decisions. It also increases the speed of decision making and makes the organization more flexible and responsive.

This article appears situations more profitable use of centralization or decentralization as of manner the management of organization.

Translated by Maciej Cieśliski