The decreasing of the time of the production changeover can influence not only the manufacturing system but also can affect the functionality of the logistics system, an enterprise costs, the logistics customer service level and in result a company’s competitiveness. This time can be shortened not only by expensive technological investments but also by implementing organizational techniques like SMED. Ideas which are effectively used in production management appears to be useful also in the logistics field.

Translated by Beata Milewska