

MODERN CITY AND ITS PLACE IN SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT OF REGION

Summary

The author focuses her considerations on the role of modern city in region's social and economic development. In the article it was stated that the influence of urbanization's and metropolization's processes on the way of space's organization has still increased and it is very important. It was also shortly characterized new trends in creating settlement centres (according to P. Georgie), and next some main directions in developmental tendencies of cities were presented.

On base of done deliberations it was ascertained, that utilization of new external conditionalities, connecting first of all with European integration's process and globalization and internal ones determined by networking structure which is being only just formed in Poland, they all no doubt frame connections between city and its milieu-it means region.

As areason of the elaboration's limited volume presented matters, opinions and conclusions were depicted in synthetic form.