EUROREGIONS - TOURISM POTENTIAL

Summary

The article aims at proving that euroregions contribute to stimulating tourist activities in the cross-border areas. They constitute a specific potential allowing the beneficiaries to attract additional funds and develop projects resulting in tourism development.

The article constitutes of two parts: theoretical and empirical, in which the author presents the model of the euroregional tourism system and describes the outcome of the research conducted on the data base of small cross-border projects obtained from the Ministry of the Interior Affairs and Administration. As the outcome of the research, the typology and the inventory of tourism projects and tourism-related projects developed in all euroregions within the framework of pre-accession funds are created.

Translated by Ewa Kurjata