GLOBALISATION - CHANCES AND THREATS

SUMMARY

Lasting since the 16-th century the economic globalisation has ended the times of the isolation of non-European historical and geographical regions.

Not only is globalisation a source of development chances and the disappearance of global threats: political and military, social and economic, cultural and civilisational.

The three most significant threats are as follows:

a) The growth of nuclear power in the world.
b) The growth of economical footprint and the determination of the living planet index.
c) The growth of threat of hidden economic wars of new generations.
