Summary

This article presents an example of an ontology for methods and tools in Business Process Modeling (BPM) domain. The modeling of business processes has an important meaning for effective and efficient organization management. The proper selection and usage of relevant method or tool is determined by essential knowledge about used tool. Hence, a practical example of knowledge systematization about BPM methods was proposed. Thus it is possible to employ that approach in many times. The conclusions finish this paper.

Translated by Jaroslaw Wntróbski