KNOWLEDGE MANAGEMENT AND EXPENDITURES ON IMPROVEMENT, TRAINING AND RETRAINING OF PERSONNEL

Summary

The development of a knowledge-based economy requires appropriate human resources. Successful management of human resources requires more than merely financial incentives. What is needed is motivation by means of courses, training and other educational forms which will increase the competencies and skills of the employees. The following analysis shows a significant diversity of expenditures on improvement, training and retraining of personnel in the structure of the average monthly wages and salaries by type of activity.
