Summary

The aim of this article is to present possibilities of using topic map standard to display knowledge concerning analysis of economical ratios. Conception of topic map as knowledge representation standard is elaborated. Creating ontologies for economical ratios is briefly described. Conclusions from built topic map application for return on investment indicator in the context of using topic map to present knowledge concerning analysis of economical ratios are presented.

Translated by Helena Dudycz